

History Teacher

Beacon Academy, the only school of its kind in the country, seeks an experienced history teacher to start in July 2019. Our mission is to prepare a small cohort (about 25 kids per year) of urban students for independent high schools in the New England area through an additional year of school between 8th and 9th grades and then to provide ongoing support for them throughout high school and college. This work is not easy, and we are looking for a dedicated, hard-working, experienced, top-notch team player devoted to justice to join us.

This position is full-time; in addition to teaching the Facing History and Ourselves curriculum, we are seeking someone who has the talent and skills to either lead our recruitment team in attracting students to our school or to also teach our Writing course.

Beacon Academy seeks teachers who are idealistic, energetic, hard-working, and filled with dedication and hope. We educate students who have curious minds and an open attitude towards life, academics, and new experiences; take responsibility for their actions and schoolwork; exhibit a willingness to think about life and speak up; recognize this tremendous opportunity and have the dedication to make the most of it. More information about Beacon can be found at www.beaconacademy.org.

Interested candidates should submit a cover letter, resume, and the names of three references. All inquiries and materials should be sent to: Anne-Marie Yu-Phelps, Director of Studies, at history@beaconacademy.org.
